Paul Rose

Paul has more than 30 years of domestic and international executive leadership experience with extensive industry knowledge in the Consumer Healthcare and Consumer Packaged Goods sectors.

Having worked for blue chip multinational organisations including Cadbury Schweppes, GlaxoSmithKline (GSK), and Pfizer, Paul's career has been characterised by a high-performance trajectory of increasingly more senior roles.

His most recent position prior to joining Can Too was as Global President, Delayed Close Markets for Pfizer Consumer Healthcare.

Paul has a degree in Business Management and extensive Board experience having served on the Boards of numerous industry associations, in addition to being a director for many of the businesses in which he has been employed.

Born and raised in Sydney, Paul is married with two children. When he's not working Paul has a passion for keeping fit and enjoying the great outdoors.

His love for adventure and discovery has taken him to more than eighty countries around the world, whilst his enjoyment for trekking has seen Paul complete the Kokoda Track, Mt Kilimanjaro, Everest Base Camp, Mt Taranaki, and Mt Snowden just to name a few.

When he's back down at sea level Paul remains active by involving himself with kayaking, running and playing golf.

In the space of only ten weeks commencing in December 2020 Paul was diagnosed with three separate cancers. Despite the need for surgery on each and radiation treatment, early detection meant that each tumour was non-invasive and Paul has made a full recovery.
